

~~Carolyn Fardini~~

~~2370~~

Emily of Polson

~~ ~~ ~~ Reflective Self-Evaluation ~~ ~~ ~~

To conclude each project, please write (type) a reflective self-evaluation that answers the following questions:

First, describe what you did, how you think it went, how well you think you did, and what you learned.

What did I learn about my topic?

What did I learn about myself?

What did I learn about the process(es) I went through?

What did I learn the hard way?

Which thinking skills did I use and in what ways were those abilities improved through my work on this project?

What were the creative processes or products in my project?

What was the most surprising/shocking/interesting thing I learned?

What obstacles did I encounter and how did I work to overcome them?

What positive risks did I take while working on this project and what did I learn by taking them?

What would I do differently next time and why?

What was my definition of success? Did I meet it? To what degree? Why or why not?

What were my Learning and Final Product Goals? Did I accomplish any of them?

What new inquiry questions do I have?

What new information did I find out about my topic that seems odd, paradoxical, or contrary to what I thought before?

What didn't I find out that I thought I would?

What continuing problems or issues still need to be researched?

What personally affected me in my research?

Am I different than I was at the beginning of my research? How have I changed?